

Art, Connection, and Well-being: Exploring the Social Value of Culture

Tuesday, June 4, 2024

13:30 - 17:15 *Doors open at 13:00

Price
free

Capacity
220

With Simultaneous Interpretation

With the epidemic of the new coronavirus, many social activities have been restricted as "unnecessary and non-urgent." Cultural activities such as festivals, traditional culture, art and sports were severely restricted. These activities are thought to lead to well-being, that is, to express one's own way of life in a rich connection between people, and to live with pride and "ikigai." However, the extent to which these cultural activities have the effect of enhancing well-being has not been fully scientifically evaluated and understood. In this symposium, we will discuss the significance and potential of cultural activities in the post-corona era with the world's top researchers in cultural capital and social capital.

Schedule Introduction

"The Significance of Scientifically Exploring the Value of Art and Connection"
Naoki Kondo (Professor, Graduate School of Medicine, Kyoto University)

Naoki Kondo
Professor,
Graduate School of Medicine,
Kyoto University

Ichiro Kawachi
Professor,
Harvard School of Public Health

Daisy Fancourt
Professor,
University College London

Part 1: Keynote Speeches

1. "The University of the Arts' Attempt to Promote Cultural Prescription"
Tatsuya Ito (Professor, Center for Social Cooperation, Tokyo University of the Arts)
2. "Cultural Capital and Social Capital: The Significance of Culture from the Perspective of Social Epidemiology"
Ichiro Kawachi (Professor, Harvard School of Public Health)
3. "Epidemiological research on the health benefits of art" * Video Presentation
Daisy Fancourt (Professor, University College London)

Tatsuya Ito
Professor,
Center for Social Cooperation,
Tokyo University of the Arts

Mari Uzawa Urabe
President,
Uzawa Kokusai Gakkan

Yukiko Uchida
Professor,
Institute for the Future of Human Society, Kyoto University

Part 2: Remarks

1. "Cultivating Place Well-being through Cultural Practices"
Yukiko Uchida (Professor, Institute for the Future of Human Society, Kyoto University)
2. "Social Common Capital and Cultrue"
Mari Uzawa Urabe (President, Uzawa Kokusai Gakkan)

Place

Kyoto University
International Science Innovation Building,
West Building 5F, Symposium Hall
(on-site only)

Part 3: Panel Discussion

"Art, Connection, and Wellbeing: Rethinking the social value of culture"
Moderators: Naoki Kondo, Mari Urabe
Panelists: Ichiro Kawachi, Yukiko Uchida, Tatsuya Ito

How to apply

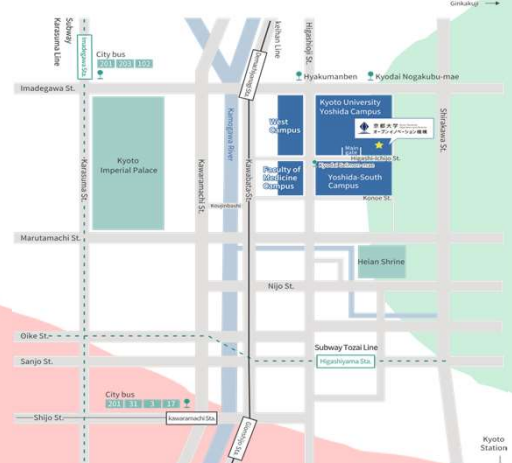

If you would like to participate, please apply from the QR code on the right.

Deadline: Friday, May 31, 2024

* We will close once capacity is reached.

* If you have any questions, feel free to reach out to us at:
Art Tourist Co., Ltd.

art_wellbeing@art-tourist.co.jp

Co-sponsored by: "Department of Social Epidemiology, Graduate School of Medicine, Kyoto University," "Center for Art Communication and Co-Creation to Create an Inclusive Society, Tokyo University of the Arts," and "Institute for the Future of Human Society, Kyoto University."

Cooperated by: "Uzawa International Studies," and "Social Common Capital and Future Endowment Research Division (Institute for the Future of Human Society, Kyoto University)."

Supported by: "Kyoto City," "Yabu City," "Glocal Institute for Medical, Cultural, and Economic," "Houdouji Experimental Temple," and "CNC, Ltd."